

Workplace Preparedness Audit: Illness & Injury Prevention During COVID-19

Ensure that your business' safety measures and reopening plans are designed to address the new risks of today's world. Businesses of all kinds are strategizing ways to keep operations running while adhering to new social distancing guidelines and other public health recommendations such as temperature screenings and contact tracing. Meanwhile, the risk of everyday workplace injuries has grown as a result of additional stress and fatigue experienced by employees facing new work parameters. With the second wave of COVID-19 sweeping across the country, now is the time to make sure your business is prepared to handle the stress.
